A Year We All Got Through Together

This has been the year that, faced with the unprecedented catastrophe of the new coronavirus, the City of Yokohama, its citizens, and its business people/community all took up the challenge and worked together in a city-wide effort to bring dynamism and vitality back to our streets. I want to express again my deepest thanks to all the staff at our medical institutions and welfare facilities that are even now battling the virus on the frontlines, and to all who are doing their utmost to support our city's society and economic activities

The City of Yokohama has done its utmost to address the challenge. We have already launched a series of Economy and Daily Live Countermeasures funded at more than ¥600 billion, and in addition to securing the necessary framework for providing medical care, implementing thorough infectious disease countermeasures, and providing support for our citizens, business people, and others in serious need. Going forward we will put in place even more measures to protect a safe and secure life for all our citizens, and will do our utmost to revitalize our economy even one day sooner.

In the midst of the corona crisis, the City of Yokohama led the world in holding a major international arts festival, Yokohama Triennale 2020, and our annual Autumn Satoyama Garden Festa with many autumnal flowers of Yokohama posted the largest attendance in its history. Even now, we are holding yorunoyo -- Yokohama Cross Light Illumination, decorating

Hayashi Fumiko
Mayor of Yokohama

Yokohama at night with beautiful illuminations, and on December 10 we will start the French Film Festival in Japan 2020. Culture and the arts, nature, and beautiful landscapes/scenic beauty have a tremendous power to heal people's hearts and impart us with courage and hope. I hope that many of you will take time to enjoy these events.

This time, as we welcome the end of the old year and the ringing in of the new, is also a time when there are more and more opportunities to spend time with our families and friends. To protect not only yourselves but those dear to you, be sure not to forget to take all the measures to prevent infections. Please enjoy fulfilling days during this season, and welcome in a wonderful new year.

Preventing the spread of new coronavirus infections

Be Mindful of How You Spend the Year-end and New Year's Holidays

To halt further spread of new coronavirus infections, creation of new and serial clusters must be prevented. Especially during the year-end/New Year period, gatherings involving drinking increase and new infection clusters are often the result. It is important for each of us, throughout the period, to remain conscious of the "five scenes" that increase the risk of infection, and to understand how to enjoy gatherings while lowering the risk. Let's work together and prevent the spread of infections.

Five scenes increasing the risk of infection

- ① Social gatherings and the like involving drinking
- ② Eating and drinking with many people, or for long periods
- ③ Conversations without wearing masks
- ④ Living together in small spaces
- ⑤ Moving around within a workplace (going to a break room, smoking room, etc.)

How to enjoy gatherings while lowering the risk of infection

- ① Drink with fewer people and for shorter times, if possible, with those with whom you regularly spend time; drink in moderation and avoid "pub-crawling."
- ② Do not share chopsticks or cups.
- ③ Sit diagonally as much as possible, not face-to-face or side-by-side.
- ④ Wear a mask during conversations, as much as possible.
- ⑤ Select places with strong preventive measures, including proper ventilation.
- ⑥ Do not attend if you feel unwell or weak.
